The express Train

Every morning at half past nine
The express train comes down the line.
Around the hill it takes the bend.
White puffs of smoke it skyward sends.
Three short whistles and one long one,
And as fast as I can to the gate I run.
For the engine driver's my Dad you see,
and that's his special signal for me.
I wave to my Dad from the place where I'd be,
And from his seat near the engine he waves back to me.
